The main purpose which this volume serves is to demonstrate the need of an autobiography. Mr. Russell was supposed to have special facilities and un-usual equipment for writing a good biography of Mr. Gladstone, but there is little evidence in his work to show that he was specially fitted either in the possesion of new material or of intellectual resources f a literary undertaking of such magnitude. produced a very inadequate book and revealed a small mind in dealing with a great subject. Mr. Gladstone as the foremost man in English public life has a unique personality. An autobiography will receive the impress of his character and will offer an adequat presentation of the man as he is. Mr. Russell's failure to do more than to compile a summary of the events of his career and to moralize feebly about traits of his character with which he is in imperfect sympathy ought to be a warning to other ambition biographers to avoid a subject to which only Mr. Glad-stone can do justice. The publication of this work will inevitably strengthen the demand of the Englishspeaking world for a crowning literary work from Mr. Gladstone in his old age that will deal with the memorable events of his public life.

Of the eleven chapters comprised in Mr. Russell's unfortunate book, the first and the last present perhaps the only novel features. The opening chapter contains an interesting account of Mr. Gladstone's school and university life. In the Liverpool house where he was born controversy was in the air. It was the father's habit to discuss all questions with his A succession of arguments on topics great and small formed the staple of family conversation. The children and their parents are described as arguing about everything. "They would debate as to whether the troat should be boiled or broiled, whether a window should be opened, and whether it was likely to be fine or wet next day. It was all perfectly good humored, but curious to a stranger, because of the evident care which all the disputants took to advance humored, but curious to a stranger, but curious covident care which all the disputants took to advance no proposition, even as to the prospect of rain, rashly."

The young logician was accustomed to controversy and discussion from the cradle. "There was the father's masterful will and keen perception, the sweetness and piety of the mother, wealth, with all its substantial the value of money, a rigid avoidance of extravagance and excess; everywhere a strennous purpose in life, constant employment and concentrated ambition." There was everything in the home to make Mr. Gladstone the man he is, and almost from the outset of paratively but little known even to the inhabitants of the his school life his companions felt that he had a great part to play in life. At Eton he worked hard, was arderly and conscientious. Even as a schoolboy he exercised an influence for good, encouraging his companions to be studious and to debate public questions with fairness, and turning his glass upside-down and declining to drink when a coarse toast was proposed.

Mr. Russell gives some fresh details of this school life at Eton, showing that the boy Gladstone was seen to the greatest advantage in the debates of the "Literati" and in the editorship of the "Miscellany." "Literati" and in the editorship of the "Miscellany."
His maiden syech at the debating club opened with the characteristic words: "In this age of increased and increasing civilization." Subsequently he delivered a fervid peroration on some question relating to Queen Anne's last Ministry. The last words were: "In common fairness and in common candor, I feel myself compelled to give my decisive verdict against the conduct of men whose measures I firmly believe to have been hostile to British interests, destructive of British been hostile to British interests, destructive of British glory, and subversive of the splendid and I trust last-ing fabric of the British Constitution." This sounds for ing fabric of the British Constitution." This sounds for all the world like the perorations of some of his famous speeches. As he was always debating when a boy, so was he constantly writing. As editor of the "Eton Miscellany" he wrote prolognes, epilogues, leading articles, historical essays, satirical shetches, classical transalations and humorous poetry. His literary infustry was incessant. Indeed as a schoolboy all the standard phenomenatics of the country was ween the marked characteristics of the coming man were un-

The other chapter to which we have referred is striking because it discloses the infirmities of temper with which a small-minded biographer has approached the contemplation of a very great man. It assumes to present a critical analysis of Mr. Gladstone's character, but it only serves to reveal the petty jealousies existing among the group of admirers swarming about the Liberal leader. After making some trivial and commonplace remarks about Mr. Gladstone's religious-ness, love of power, conservative instincts, businesslike aptitude, courtesy and attractiveness in private life, the biographer improves the opportunity for striking a sharp rap over the great man's head at some rivals whom he dislikes. He complains that Mr. Gladstone's manner toward intellectual inferiors is almost ludicrously humble, that all his geese are swans, that he is lacking "in sharp-sightedness as to and is constantly exposed "to the arts of scheming mediocrities, on whose interested opinio is apt to place a fatally implicit reliance." Mr. Russell may have failed to take the great man's measure. but he is at least good enough to favor the public with his own-and it is in inches and not very many of them. These closing sentences reveal the biographer's emptiness of mind in contemplating the character of the greatest Englishman of his day : "The dignity, the order, the simplicity, and above all the fervent and manly piety of his daily life form a spectacle far more impressive than his most magnificent performances in Parliament or on the platform. He is the idol of those who are most closely associated with him, whether by the ties of blood, of friendship or of duty; and perhaps it is his highest praise to say that he is not un worthy of the devotion which he inspires."

LITERARY NOTES.

Lovers of Dickens will find it hard to wait for the September number of "Harper's Magazine." For therein will appear for the first time of publication the first instalment of a delightful series of letters written by Dickens to Wilkie Collins-and written, too, at the most interesting period of the great anthor's career. They will run through three numbers of the magazine. George Macdonald is revising and arranging for pub-

Ocean Steamers.

For full particulars, freight or passage, apply to JAMES E. WARD & CO., 113 Wall-st.

Steamers leave San Francisco as follows:

Local trading absorbed most attention at the Product Exchange yesterday and the volume of wheat specula tion did not reach 2,200,000 bushels. It was a set of an unscitled market from start to finish, July gaining 11-5 cent for the day, while later months showed of an unsettled market from start to finish, July gaining 11-8 cent for the day, while later months showed little change. There was absolutely nothing done by the foreign element, and outside trading was at a minimum. There was a firm opening; followed by an advance of 3-sab-s cent, based mainly on higher cables from England and the buillish purport of the circular put out by the Farmers' Alliance leaders. Seaboar clearances were again liberal, and tais, too, caused some little covering of shorts, thus adding to the buoyancy. French cables, however, were decidedly weaker, and the report regarding the supposed reduction in grain duties by Germany was denied. This, with the big receipts West, caused a selling movement, attended with more or less landatation of fongs, culminaling in a break on deliveries after July. The latter was sustained by a continued good export demand, which prompted light offerings. July opened at 97.1-2 and closed at 98.1-4 cents. August started at 95.1-2 and then touched 95.3-4 cents, from which there was break to 95.1-4 cents. December ranged from 98.1-29.97.7-8 cents. The spot market advanced about 1 cent and there were 304,000 bushels taken for export. At the outports about 200,000 bushels were reported taken for shipment. Millers took 32,000 bushels. In corn there was also a quiet day, less than 400,000 bushels changing hands, with trade principally of a local professional character. Arrivals at the West were smaller than general expectations, and the easies were firm, both of which had a steengthening effect. Moreover, there were predictions of frost for to-night at the West, and this was also used by the builts. July closed unchanged, while later options showed a rise of 3-4 cent. On the spot the market ruiced firm, and 20,000 bushels were taken for export, part special anges.

August.
Oats were not affected by the rise in corn. August.
Oats were not affected by the rise in corn. Oa the contrary, there was a general pressure to sell, and as trade was slow, both spot and options suffered a decline of 1-4s-1-2 cent.
Land broke again and closed 5s/7 points lower, of further selling by big opperators at the West.
Closing prices were: Wheat-July, 9s-1-4 cents; August, 95-3-8; September, 95-3-4; October, 96-1-8; August, 95-3-8; September, 95-3-4; Cotober, 91-3-4; December, 98-1-4; May, $1-0-3-4. Corn-July, 70 cents; August, 65-7-8; September, 63; October, 91-3-4; September, 32. Lard-July, $6-68; August, $6-8. September, 32. Lard-July, $6-68; August, $6-8. September, 36-9. Cotober, 86-90; December, $7-10. The receipts of grain and flour reported vesterday $7. New-York, fulladelphia, Baltamore and Boston were affollows; Wheat, 325,411 bushels; corn, 45,037 bushels; oats, 117,013 bushels; total grain, 4-9,061 bushels; oats, 117,013 bushels; total grain, 4-9,061 bushels; corn, 29,318 bushels; oats, 178,755 bushels; total grain, 1,002,470 bushels; flour, 7,936 barrels.

THE TRADE IN CHICAGO. Chicago, July 24 (Special).—Wheat closed to-day about 1-8 cent over Thursday night, having shown as one moment during the day a loss of about 1.2 cent, and at another moment a gain of about 1.2 cent. There were plenty of announcements, but they conflicted. Paris cables were down; Liverpool up. There was no doubt about the receipts; they were enormous everywhere, over 800,000 bushels at Chicago, st. Louis and Toledo. There was a prediction of frost for Wisconsin issued by the Government bureau. That saved the price. The day's selling was led by Cudaly. The best local opinion is still bearish, influenced by the extraordinary receipts and by the rather doubtful tone of cables. It seems ceriain that the July receipts here at Chicago will exceed 10,000 cars. They aggregate 6,400 aircady; the estimate for Sadurday is 725, the average for next week is expected to considerably exceed 700 cars a day. December sold between $7.34 and $8.5-8 cents, and closed at $8.3-8 set 1.2. Cora advanced almost a cent over Thursday night's close september sold between $3.5-8 and $4.7-8 cents, closeing at 54-1-2. The frost scare did the business. The New Yorkers availed themselves of the strength to dis size selling, White unlocating about 500,000 bushels. The receipts were 257 cars, the estimate for same day, 410. Oats furnished no new excitement. The manufacturers of pork products generally are again pretty unanimously bearish. Pork, lard and the unenced and closed at about the same figure. and Toledo. There was a prediction of frost for Wis-
